Objectives

The aim of this orientation workshop is to equip new students with the most important writing expectation. On top of building the vocabulary of their own study fields, students need to be aware of the writing and research writing expectation from the lectures and professors they meet. This workshop will bring students the attention of writing organization; how to use the sources they have found in the research; how to cite them correctly; when to paraphrase and quote accurately; and how to avoid plagiarism.

Note:

1. Due to the current pandemic situation, this workshop will be conducted online. The webex link could be found above the information section.
2. I will be online 30 minutes before the workshop commences so that you could try the webex link out and straighten any technical issues.
3. This workshop is quite technical, however, it is a preparatory workshop to prepare students for their new semester. This is a foundation of building your writing skills for your university career.
4. There are notes available in the Moodle and the Moodle link is in the information section above. I believe that you need a password to get to the Moodle, please contact Ms. Dorrit Klappdor.
5. Slides are not available for this workshop as the notes pertain all the necessary information needed.
6. If you had to miss this workshop on this day, video tutorials are available for you and the links are in the Moodle. You are responsible to watch the topics that you have missed.
